

Do You Hear Me? Do You See Me? Do You Care?

Giving Voice to Black Women's Health and Maternal Health Care

Please join us virtually on Tuesday, April 23rd, from 1:00 - 3:00 PM to take part in OEC's webinar "Do you hear me? Do you see me? Do you care? - Giving Voice to Black Women's Health and Maternal Health Care"

Womanhood is a charge bestowed to many that carries numerous responsibilities, is characterized by many roles, and faces a multitude of challenges manifesting from archaic societal norms. When you look beyond gender and factor in race and ethnicity, the charge becomes all the more complex. In recognition of Minority Health Month, this month's webinar will focus on Black Women's Health and Maternal Health Care. We want to highlight the importance of access to, and provision of equitable health care for women, especially Black and Brown women, who are often faced with disproportionately high health challenges and negative birth outcomes. We will draw attention to the importance of equitable access to high quality health care for all women, including those from marginalized communities.

- Opening Keynote Speaker: Ayesha Clarke, Executive Director of Health Equity Solutions
- Engaging Panel Discussion
- Closing Message Speaker: SciHonor Devotion from Earth's Natural Touch: Birth Care and Beyond
